

1. Identify the main components of the system.
The system consists of several key components: the user interface, the data storage layer, the processing logic, and the external services. Each component plays a crucial role in the overall functionality of the application.
